There the suggestion by Jupan that the interpretation agreed to may be amended so that that country does not appear to get any special advantages over the others in regard to its homeland.

It is to be realized that any of the cabinet members are making sacrifices in the holding of such posts in view of their ability to command much higher salaries in other fields, but they entered the cabinet as an aid to country and the administration. They are men of recognized ability in whom the president has confidence or he would not have appointed In the present administration it is not self glorification that is being sought but the accomplishment of those things which are for the best interests of the nation. Thus it ican by appre slated that the president was moderate In his criticism when he declares the rumor to be silly.

PROTECTION AFTER COLLISIONS.

Examples which serve to emphasize the need of giving more attention to safety measures are steadily being brought to attention through the daily chapter of accidents. It is plainly evident that great aid is certain to be obtained through taking precautions, and that through such means accidents can be anticipated and protection given in a much greater number of instances than are revealed from

It was only last month that there was a large loss of life in a train week in Pennsylvania. Human failure made the wreck possible but after the smash had occurred it was the wooden cars which furnished food for the flames and permitted the fire to roast alive those who would otherwise have been rescued.

Thus while there is need for greater protection is connection with the operation of trains it cannot fail to be recognized that there is good reason back of the plea for the replacing of the wooden cars with that type of equipment which makes the protection of the traveler greater in case an accident due to which makes the protection of the traveler greater in case an accident due to the war. It was necessary during the war and it is quite as important now

It is also well to recall one other thing, according to the opinions of persons here who have followed the conference closely. Immediately after Mr. Briand made his startling speech at the plenary session, it was apparent that the conference would run across a big ger snag in the insistance of France than through the reluctance of Japan purpose of the respective gatherings is in carrying out the proposed programme, decidedly different one is to deal with the question of future peace through understanding and disarmament, while the other is to deal with the economic problems involving Europe. them unusual—impossible—that is, all but one.

"First there was a music student who hoped we wouldn't object to her singing five hours a day as practice.

And then there was a pretty stenographer who wanted the use of the parlor nearly every night in the week to entertian her callers. I could fancy myself leading Arthur back into the dining room so's to leave the cost clear for her. Next there was a fussy old lady who said she was in search of a room with a piano and canary bird in it. I told her we had a stuffed dove in the attic that I could bring down and that the folks next door kept a phonograph and a baby inal scheme to get a free meal. At any across it yesterday," exclaimed the wonext door kept a phonograph and a baby if she wanted music, but the arrange-

Beginning next week the White House formal dinners and state receptions abandoned by Mr. Wilson will be resum-ed by the Hardings, and the diplomatic corps, the judiciary, the army and navy and congress will each have a night seapirt for their entertainment. There will also be dinners for the ligh offi-cials and one special dinner given in honor of Speaker and Mrs. Gillett. This is also a return to pre Wilson customs. The only innovation being the length of the receiving hours on New Year's day.

SIR HENRY VANE.

The fate of Sir Henry Vane, the English statesman, has always more or less interested America, for he had in his younger days served as governor of Massachusetts during the Colonial period. At an early age Vane acquired them. strong Puritan views, inspite of the per-sonal efforts of those who made the at-tempt, at the king's request, to persuade him otherwise. Vane was only 22 when he emigrated to Massachusetts, where he hoped to enjoy the free exercise of his religion. The following year he was elected governor. He was only allowed to serve one year, being defeated by Winhrop, chiefly on account of the protecion he had given a Mrs. Hutchinson in he religious controversy which she

READ YOUR CHARACTER By Digby Phillips, Copyrighted 1921

Truthful Wrinkles,

Men and women think they conceal their thoughts and habits of mind, but they cannot. Though they do not realize it, they write the story of their thoughts and attitude toward the world plainly across their faces, where the world may read if it choose—though for the most part the world is too busy with its own thoughts to bother.

Just as inherited tendencies of mind and character are revealed to the scien-tific characterologist in one set of indi-cations, so the acquired or developed cations, so the acquired or developed character of the individual is revealed in another set.

To the latter classification belong wrinkles. Do you know there are certain specific furrows and lines of the face that measure the individual's love of truth? You'il find them around the eyes. They are made by the muscles surrounding the eyes. And unless the individual is of on trying to get at the truth of some puzzling matter, and you'll note that unconsciously you have begun to squint, even if but slightly, as though in an ac-tual physical effort to see through it. The man or woman who habitually tries to get at the exact truth of things, and therefore has a high regard for the value of truth, gradually acquires these wrinkles caused by tensing the muscles surrounding the eyes. Tomorrow-Stubby Hands.
